Excerpt: . . . 12 intelligence to see the toxic mixture of corruption, insider business, organized crime and capital flight that undermined Russian re-forms and the effectiveness of our support. They were entirely visible in the Russian press, even in English, and any attentive observer could see them. The historic failing of American policy in this period was that it gave support too uncritically and for too long to this phony crony capitalism in Russia. It did so rhetorically, politically, and financially, chiefly through the IMF. The result has been the prospects for true economic reform in Russia have been made, in many ways, more difficult than they were initially. Worst of all, we have lost much respect and admiration among the Russian people, as have the very ideas of capitalism and democracy. Now, this in no way ignores what has been achieved under such programs as Nunn-Lugar, but as I have already said, the failures of Russian reforms very much endanger those achievements. The problem with the IMF has been more one of perversion, I would say, than diversion of funds. Rather than encouraging the stabilization and growth of the Russian economy, the IMF has served to legitimize the extraction and the flight of wealth, of capital. But there does, in fact, seem to have been something like diversion in the summer of 1998, and I would be happy to summarize the evidence, if the Committee is interested,...
